

A stud four year college basketball player married with two kids goes undrafted to the NBA. Tryout after tryout multiple teams say he is just not what he is looking for. After all this about to give up until that call comes in from his favorite NBA team he loved as a kid to come audition.

Sending him to play in france to develop for two years he meets a girl who he instantly falls in love with after his first season in france he is on his way to the airport to fly home for two weeks to see his family before returning back to france to start his second season before he gets his first rookie contract to play in the NBA.

The girl he is in love with in france tells him that she is pregnant before he gets on the plane to fly home to his family. The plane gets high jacked with all this running through his head does he make it home? If so does he tell his wife? Does he come back to france to persue his dream in the NBA?